Drum & Percussion Class

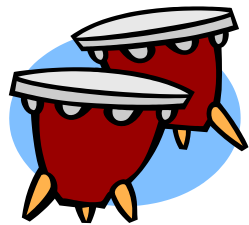

In this 12 week drum & percussion class, students will learn basic rhythms, solo improvisation, practice unison rhythms and read drum charts while making music together and playing along with CD's. Drumming has many benefits. Including increased focus. While following along with the beat and learning to keep tempo students are exercising their brain and developing skills that without drumming they may not ever use. Drumming also increases concentration, it develops communication skills and encourages Students to listen to each other. It is a great way for students to explore their creativity, which leads to greater respect and understanding of themselves and others.

Some long term benefits to drumming are hand to eye coordination and self confidence. If your child drums and learns to do it well he or she will have a great sense of accomplishment.... and IT'S FUN!

*Students will perform for parents & guest on the last class.

* *This is a great class to see if your student is ready for private drum lessons.

Jeff Marks is an experienced teacher who specializes in drums, percussion, piano, and guitar. He holds a master's degree in percussion performance from Wichita State University in Kansas, and a bachelor's degree in music education from St. Norbert College in Wisconsin. He is experienced in all areas of percussion, including snare drum, keyboard percussion, drum set, and concert band/orchestral percussion. He was a member of the Americano's Drum and Bugle Corps where he marched and played the multi-tenor drums. He has spent many years as a professional drum set performer, playing jazz, rock, blues, and country. Jeff enjoys teaching note reading, scales, chords, composition, improvisation and music theory. He believes all students are capable of learning music if they are motivated and have a good teacher and he strives to help each student do THEIR best while working hard to make the lessons as much fun as possible. It is important to develop good rhythm, so he likes to use play along CD's with the students, or to play along himself. It is important for the student to learn in a step by step manner, so the student has a full understanding of the music. He believes music is also a great way for students to make friends and to share a common activity with others.
